The definitive guide to state-wide elections

General Election
Tuesday, November 3

ARIZONA
VOTER GUIDE

Dear Fellow Arizonans,

When our Founding Fathers set about to forge our nation, they did so with the upmost intention of participatory governance, where the people have a voice and government power comes from the consent of the governed. In fact, Samuel Adams called voting “one of the most solemn trusts in human society.” On November 3rd, you will have the opportunity to exercise that trust and go to the polls and make your voice heard.

The stakes are high in this election and knowing what is on the ballot and what it means can sometimes be overwhelming and challenging. In the nonpartisan 2026 AZ Voter Guide, you will find information on candidates for the U.S. House of Representatives, Arizona Statewide Offices, as well as for the Arizona State Legislature. However, what you will not find is an endorsement of any particular candidate. Each candidate in this election cycle was treated equally and had the same opportunity to weigh in and respond to our questions.

Please also visit CAP’s azvoterguide.com, to find even more information, including:

- Survey responses from judges, school board and other local candidates
- How to identify your district and where to vote
- Comments and biographical information from the candidates
- Access to a personalized copy of this Guide

Many elections in our country’s storied histories have been won, or even tied, by only a handful of votes. Your vote matters, and it is my sincere hope that our 2026 AZ Voter Guide will prove a valuable resource as you cast your vote on November 3rd.

For freedom,

Peter Gentala, Esq.

GUIDE TO ARIZONA'S 2026 BALLOT PROPOSITIONS

PROP 141

Prohibit Tax; Monitoring; Vehicle Mileage

Proposition 141 would amend the Arizona Constitution to prohibit state and local governments from imposing a tax or fee based on the number of miles a person drives (often called a Vehicle Miles Traveled, or VMT, tax). It would also prohibit governments from monitoring or limiting the number of miles a person travels in a motor vehicle unless the driver voluntarily consents.

The measure includes two exceptions. It would not apply to commercial vehicles operating in multiple states that participate in interstate agreements for reporting fuel taxes or registration fees. It also would not apply to vehicles owned and operated by state or local governments.

If approved, these prohibitions would become part of the Arizona Constitution, meaning future Legislatures or local governments could not authorize a mileage tax or mandatory mileage tracking without first obtaining voter approval through another constitutional amendment.

Supporters say Proposition 141 protects taxpayers and personal privacy by preventing governments from imposing a mileage-based tax or requiring drivers to have their travel monitored. They argue placing these protections in the Arizona Constitution ensures they cannot be adopted without voter approval.

Opponents say the measure addresses a tax Arizona does not currently have and could limit future transportation funding options as fuel tax revenues decline. They argue future lawmakers should retain flexibility to address changing infrastructure funding needs.

PROP 142

Preferential Treatment; Discrimination; Prohibited Acts

Proposition 142 would amend the Arizona Constitution to prohibit state and local governments, public universities, community colleges, and school districts from granting preferential treatment or discriminating against individuals or groups based on race, sex, color, ethnicity, or national origin in public employment, education, or contracting.

The measure would prohibit requiring individuals to support race-based preferences or certain diversity, equity, and inclusion concepts as a condition of employment, admission, graduation, certification, or contracting. It would also prohibit public funding for offices, positions, programs, or trainings designed to promote preferential treatment based on race or ethnicity, with certain exceptions.

The proposition would prohibit disciplinary policies or practices that treat students or employees differently based on race or ethnicity and would establish specified exceptions to these requirements.

Supporters say Proposition 142 ensures equal treatment by prohibiting government preferences or discrimination based on race or ethnicity. They argue decisions should be based on individual merit and qualifications rather than group identity.

Opponents say Proposition 142 impedes efforts to address disparities and create more inclusive educational and workplace environments. They argue the measure would restrict programs designed to expand opportunities for historically disadvantaged groups.

PROP 144

Citizenship; Identification; Contributions; Early Voting

Proposition 144 would amend the Arizona Constitution to establish requirements related to voter eligibility, election procedures, and campaign contributions.

The measure would reaffirm that only U.S. citizens may register and vote in Arizona elections and would require voters to present valid government-issued identification before casting a ballot, as provided by law. It would require voters to have the option to have their ballots counted at their voting location on Election Day.

The proposition would prohibit foreign nationals from contributing or spending money or anything of value to influence Arizona elections. It would also allow election laws, including those involving early voting and mail voting, if they are reasonably connected to interests such as election security, accurate results, efficient administration, and public confidence. The measure would apply to elections held on or after January 1, 2028.

Supporters say Proposition 144 strengthens election security by requiring voter identification, protecting elections from foreign influence, and increasing transparency in the vote-counting process. They argue it reinforces confidence that Arizona elections are decided only by eligible citizens.

Opponents say Proposition 144 would create unnecessary barriers to voting and make election administration more complicated. They argue existing safeguards already protect election integrity and that additional requirements will disproportionately affect some eligible voters, discouraging them from participating in the voting process.

PROP 316

Food; Municipal Tax; Exemption

Proposition 316 would amend the Arizona Constitution to limit the ability of cities, towns, and other local taxing jurisdictions to impose or increase taxes or fees on food and certain nonalcoholic beverages intended for home consumption.

Local governments with an existing food tax could not increase the tax above 2% and, if the tax is already 2% or higher, could not increase it further. Jurisdictions without a food tax could adopt one only with voter approval and the rate could not exceed 2%. The measure also prohibits new food taxes or tax increases between June 30, 2025, and June 30, 2027.

Supporters say Proposition 316 helps keep groceries affordable by limiting local taxes on food. They argue voters—not local governments—should decide whether to adopt or increase taxes on essential household groceries.

Opponents say the measure reduces local control and limits the communities' ability to raise revenue for essential services. They argue that elected local officials and voters should retain the flexibility to address local budget needs.

PROP 317

Drug Cartels; Terrorist Organizations

Proposition 317 would amend the Arizona Constitution to declare that drug cartels are terrorist organizations. It defines drug cartels as associations of persons engaged in human smuggling, drug trafficking for profit, or acts of terrorism.

The measure also requires the Arizona Department of Homeland Security to use all lawful means within its authority to address threats posed by drug cartels. Additionally, it states that the proposition does not support an individual's claim for asylum under federal law.

Supporters say Proposition 317 sight the serious threat posed by drug cartels and claim the referral reinforces Arizona's commitment to combating human smuggling, drug trafficking, and related criminal activity. They argue the referral strengthens public safety and border security efforts.

Opponents argue the measure is largely symbolic because terrorism and immigration matters are primarily governed by federal law. They argue it will create legal uncertainty without providing significant new enforcement authority. Opponents claim the measure is too broad in its definitions and may impact individuals who are merely associated with

PROP 318

Interscholastic; Intramural athletics; Biological sex

Proposition 318 would amend Arizona law to establish requirements for participation in school and athletic association sports based on an athlete's biological sex as recorded at birth.

The measure would require public and private schools, higher education institutions, and athletic associations to designate athletic teams as male, female, coeducational, or mixed. It would prohibit males from participating on female-designated interscholastic and intramural sports teams.

The proposition would also establish requirements for access to certain private athletic facilities, including restrooms, locker rooms, and shower rooms, based on biological sex. It would allow individuals to bring legal action for alleged violations and would not restrict participation on teams aligned with an athlete's sex or designated as coeducational or mixed.

Supporters say Proposition 318 protects fairness and equal opportunity in women's sports by ensuring female athletic teams remain reserved for biological females. They argue it also protects privacy in athletic facilities.

Opponents say Proposition 318 will unfairly exclude transgender students from participating in school activities and will harm students who already face challenges. They argue schools should have flexibility to address participation and inclusion issues.

PROP 319

Food; Municipal Tax; Exemption

Proposition 319 would establish voter approval requirements for the continued use of photo enforcement systems that issue traffic violations for speeding or failure to obey traffic signals.

Local authorities or state agencies with existing contracts for photo enforcement systems by December 31, 2026, would be required to seek voter approval at the next general election to continue operating those systems. If approved, voters would decide every ten years whether the systems may continue.

The measure would prohibit new photo enforcement systems unless the required voter approval process is completed and would require local authorities that do not receive voter approval to stop operating their systems.

Supporters say Proposition 319 protects drivers from automated enforcement systems and keeps law enforcement decisions in the hands of trained officers rather than private companies. They argue traffic enforcement should focus on public safety, not revenue generation.

Opponents say Proposition 319 limits tools available to law enforcement and local governments to improve traffic safety. They argue photo enforcement will help reduce speeding and dangerous driving while allowing officers to focus on other priorities.

PROP 320

Instructional Expenses; Operational Spending; Enforcement

Proposition 320 would amend the Arizona Constitution to require certain larger school districts to spend at least 60% of their operational spending on direct instructional expenses. The Auditor General would define "direct instructional expenses" and "operational spending" for this requirement.

Beginning in fiscal year 2027–2028, districts that do not meet the 60% requirement would be required to increase instructional spending each year until they comply. Districts that remain out of compliance could lose a portion of their Classroom Site Fund allocation unless granted a waiver, with withheld funds redistributed to compliant districts.

Supporters say Proposition 320 directs more education funding into the classroom by requiring larger school districts to prioritize instructional spending. They argue it increases accountability and ensures taxpayer dollars are focused on student learning.

Opponents say the measure limits local control over school budgets and will not reflect the varying needs of individual districts. They argue schools should retain flexibility to determine how best to allocate resources to support students.

ARIZONA'S FUTURE STARTS WITH THE FAMILY.

The family is where children first learn stability, responsibility, love, and hope.

Only 54% of Arizona children are now born into married, two-parent homes — down from 83% in 1980.

When families thrive, schools improve, communities grow safer, and the Arizona Dream becomes more attainable.

A Center for Arizona Policy Initiative

Strong Families.
Thriving Arizona.

Understand the stakes.
